Buffalo Robes

We have culled out a limited number of hides that do not fit the specifications of our select bison robes. Not all robes are used for display. Many crafters use buffalo robes for numerous projects. Knowing this, we would like to offer them to you at a significant discount.

These second quality hides are being sold at a massive discount. There are defects such as bald patches, holes, blemishes, and stiff sections around the neck area. Still makes good tipi flooring and can be used for numerous projects.

All hides are full and measure the same as higher quality robes.

Gold Bison Split

Bison leather is a preferred leather for a wide array of native craft items, but many times the heavy weight and nature of this leather does not make it possible. We now offer a bison split that eliminates this problem. Split down to a weight averaging around 3-1/2 oz, these hides are a nice color at an unbelievable price. Hide size ranges from 5-8 SF. Perfect for moccasins, bags and small garments.

Brain Tan Look Buff Suede Buckskin

Maybe the best split leather we've gotten our hands on. A beautifully natural buckskin color reminiscent of brain-tan. There is a grain to this leather but it is buffed down slightly which gives the leather a softer and more natural feel as compared to other commercial splits. Hides average 5-8 sf and have little to no holes. A very nice leather at a very competitive price.

Iron Arrowheads

Metal arrowheads, although less common than flint, are found throughout the U.S. and were tooled by Indians from available metal, such as discarded gun parts, barrel hoops and steel or iron scraps. Patterned after points found dating back to 1750 and in use thru the 1850s.

Rifles of Colonial America, Volume II, 3rd Edition

by George Shumway & Robert P. Lienemann

Our enhanced and expanded edition of George Shumway's extensive photographic study of American longrifles made in the colonial period, the Revolutionary period, and the post-Revolutionary years before the Federal period. All 63 rifles from the 1st and 2nd editions, plus 10 more previously unpublished examples, are presented with all important dimensions and an average of 12 detailed photographs each. 40 of the 63 rifles have had most, if not all, of their images updated to be in full color. New information was supplied by co-author Robert P. Lienemann along with several other well-known collectors and expert researchers of these rifles.

Canvas Tote with Fully Beaded Front Pocket

These tote bags exhibit beadwork patterned after old Sioux style saddlebags. Only genuine Czech seed beads are used for the 18" x 8" fully beaded front pocket. The body is made of canvas and the inside is lined with a faux suede to give it a nice soft feel. Rolled leather handles are accompanied with a cotton canvas adjustable shoulder strap. The bottom is equipped with four rounded bumper-style "feet" to keep the bag off the ground. The inside has a large zippered pocket. Two snap closures secure the main opening. Dimensions are 12" High x 6 1/2" Deep x 18 1/2" Top Width (14" Bottom Width)
